

thINKingDANCE

Upping the ante on dance coverage and conversation

HOME | ARTICLES | ABOUT | CONTACT

COVID-19 Resources

Click here for general resources for the local dance community. Click here for financial resources for artists.

Photo: Bill Hebert

Download PDF

An "Open House" for Up-and-Comers by Peter Price

One effect of the depth and vibrancy of the dance community in Philadelphia today is that venues like the Performance Garage are doing a good rental business. A lot of companies with a lot of dancers are in need of a Marley covered floor and a decent sound system in a warm room. The Performance Garage offers one of the best-equipped venues in Philadelphia's rehearsal rental market: its dance floor measures a spacious 38' wide by 30' deep, its sound system is perhaps the best of any dedicated dance space in town, and its industrial blowers can keep things downright toasty in the winter months despite its cavernous size.

The Performance Garage's "Open House," showcased work by six companies currently renting there. The program opened with Untitled, a double duet of female pairs in white men's dress shirts on folding chairs, by Tess Stumpf's Infatuation Dance Company. Opened closed, Etc. choreographed by Darcy Lyons working as DDL Dance Works, had a quirky energy that was a nice match for Austin Selden's joyfully open performance presence and lanky body. The first half of the program ended with Water Dance from Somatic Movers, choreographed by Kelly Adorno, necessitating an intermission mop up.

After the pause, perhaps the most choreographically accomplished work of the evening came from Alchemy Dance Company's Amy Harding. She presented two excerpts from Rite of Passage, a work performed in its entirety last April during the Philadelphia International Festival of the Arts, which Harding set to compelling original music by collaborating composer Jonathon Bowles. The second of the two excerpts, a trio entitled Elemental Energies, built slowly to a surprising level of intensity. Next up, RenZoku Dance Works' Absence of fear displayed engaging partnering and a varied movement vocabulary suggesting that choreographer Lauren Williams is also someone to keep an eye on. The show ended with Tangle Movement Arts' crowd pleasing Half-life, a display of aerial skills created collaboratively by Tangle's cast of eight.

The Performance Garage's "Open House," presented on a cold Friday the 13th evening, showcased the strength and diversity of the dancing happening at the space, and served as a window into the ecosystem of younger Philadelphia dance companies. The first thing notable about this ecosystem is that there is no shortage of good dancers. Some standouts included Selden, Somatic Movers' Megan Quinn, RenZoku Dance Works Karmen Fails and Lauren Williams, and Alchemy Dance Company's generally strong cast. None of the evening's many movers were out of place or ill-prepared.

Something else that grabbed my attention is that in these local conditions dance remains a very gendered undertaking. The two solo dances of the evening were performed by the only two male dancers, DDL Dance Works' aforementioned Selden and Alchemy Dance Company's Kevan Sullivan. The classic dance archetypes of the solitary male dancer and the Bacchic chorus

Peter Price

Peter Price is a composer, digital artist, and media theorist. He co-directs thefidget space in Philadelphia, a research laboratory for new forms of art, performance, and media. He holds a PhD from the European Graduate School in Switzerland.

More about Peter

Recently from Peter

Balloons and Flowers for Spiel Uhr

With so many showcase series a part of the current dance landscape it is easy to forget that there was... View

Wendy Perron Weekend: the Review Revue

For 15 hours this past weekend the writers of thINKingDANCE were privileged to workshop with Wendy Perron,... View

Experimental Actions at thefidget

Editor's Note: We invited TD writer Peter Price to share his insider's point of view on upcoming... View

View all from Peter

Categories

Reviews

Support thINKingDANCE

Donate

Click the Donate button to support thINKingDANCE using a credit card or PayPal.

thINKingDANCE is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization based in Philadelphia PA. You can also make a tax-deductible donation by writing a check payable to "thINKingDANCE" and mail it to:

thINKingDANCE
c/o Chris Deephouse
622 Elkins Ave
Elkins Park PA 19027

Thank you.

of young female dancers defined much of the evening. (Tangle Movement Arts, as a company dedicated to circus disciplines, was less likely to fall into these categories from their trapezes, aerial fabrics and ropes).

The overall impression of the evening was of companies testing out their choreographic chops using standard formats, rarely straying far from their own aesthetic paradigms. However, mixed bills like these play a useful function for younger companies, giving them stage time that they might not otherwise have, often, as in this case, performing for full, and very appreciative, houses. Each company has the added benefit of exposing their work to new audiences, and to their peers. With the rental roster at the Performance Garage expanding, but in a condition of uncertainty about its future, let's hope for additional installments of "Open House" to reveal emerging facets of this Philadelphia dance ecosystem.

By Peter Price
January 17, 2012

0 Comments

Sort by

Add a comment...

Facebook Comments Plugin

Have more to say?

Write a letter to the editor. Click here to get started

Help spread the word

tD Call for Submissions
CONFINEMENT DANCE PHOTO ESSAY SERIES
 SUBMIT TO CONFINED@THINKINGDANCE.NET

THE 2020
ROCKY AWARDS
 1.27.20
 PHILADELPHIA'S ONE AND ONLY
 AWARD SHOW FOR DANCE
tD FRINGEARTS THEATRE PHILADELPHIA

PERFORMANCES
 CLASSES SPACE
PERFORMANCE GARAGE
 A SPACE FOR DANCE

2018 Dance/Kinore Resident Artist, Nora Gibson Contemporary Ballet © Joseph V. Labolito